Read the text and find the correct answers

There is a large collection of tales written by the Greek storyteller, Aesop. Little is known about his life. According to some historical facts, Aesop was a slave in ancient Greece. He was a keen observer of both animals and people. But most of the characters in his stories are animals, some of which take on human characteristics and are personified in terms of speech and emotions. It is also a bit of trickery on adults to use animals, because it allows adult readers to sort of "skip" imagining themselves as the characters in the story. However, the majority of his characters retain their animalistic qualities: tortoises are slow, hares are quick, tigers eat birds, etc. Aesop uses these qualities and the natural tendencies of animals to focus on human traits and wisdom. Aesop's fables may be short, but they offer wise lessons at the end. It is up to us to discover for ourselves what is hidden behind the images presented by the author.

- Why did Aesop prefer to depict animals instead of people in his fables? Because he
A) loved animals
B) didn't want to show who he really meant
C) didn't respect people
D) hated people
- What qualities do the animals in his tales still preserve?
A) Human B) Animalistic C) Artistic D) Artificial
- Who was Aesop according to some historical facts?
A) A slave B) A musician C) A priest D) A manager
- What is usually written at the end of the fable?
A) A moral B) Wrongness C) An advert D) Annotation
- What do Aesop's fables make many people do?
A) Sing B) Dance C) Think D) Take care of animals
