0	A vital skill for anyone running a business it is the ability to communicate
00	effectively. This is particularly important in a meeting where complex arguments
8	need to be put forward and where it is too vital to get the best out of the situation
9	and those present in as little time as possible. Before calling a meeting, ask
10	yourself if you actually need one, since so many are unproductive results and do
11	not really need to take place. Sending an email or by using another means of 12	communication, such as a simple phone call, might achieve the desired results in 13	half the time. Having established the need for a meeting, so inform those you
14	wish to attend and ask people to be punctual. Concerning the key to a good
15	meeting is an agenda, which needs to be sent out in advance and should state the 16	date, time and location. It should also contain the names of those ones who will 17	be present and set that out, starting with the most important, the points for 18	discussion. Ask in advance for suggestions for items to be discussed about but
19	set a deadline for submissions in order to reduce the amount of time that has to be spent under 'Any Other Business'.
