

WritingTime: 1 hour 15 minutes*

An English language magazine invites young people to participate in a writing competition. The participant must write a text based on the following premise:

A young man gets into the future world 50 years from now which is ruled by artificial intelligence. Occasionally he finds out that AI still does not understand jokes. He writes a letter to his friends in the real world describing the situation AI fails to understand and gives advice to the people living at the present time.

You decide to take part and write the letter in the name of the young man.

The letter should contain

- the information about how you got into the future,
- the description of your impressions,
- a joke based on pun - a humorous use of a word that has two meanings or that sounds like another word - which is not understood by AI,
- advice to the people living at the present time.

Write 220-250 words. Don't write any postal addresses and dates. Underline the pun.
