Machu Picchu

Machu Picchu is an ancient city in Peru, high in the Andes mountains. It was built by the Inca people in the 15th century and later left empty. The Spanish never found it, so it stayed hidden for hundreds of years. In 1911 an American explorer, Hiram Bingham, discovered it and told the world about this mysterious place.

The city has stone houses, temples, and terraces for growing plants. It is often called the “Lost City of the Incas.” Today Machu Picchu is a UNESCO World Heritage site and one of the New Seven Wonders of the World. Thousands of tourists climb the mountains every year to see it. Because the place is very popular, Peru has special rules to protect it from too many visitors.

The Polar Bear

The polar bear is the largest land carnivore in the world. Adult males can weigh more than 600 kilograms and are more than two metres long. Polar bears live in the Arctic, where it is very cold. They have thick white fur and a layer of fat under their skin that keeps them warm. Their white colour also helps them to hide when they hunt.

Polar bears are excellent swimmers and can swim many kilometres without stopping. They hunt mainly seals, which they catch on the ice. Today polar bears are in danger because global warming is melting the ice, and the animals have less space to live and hunt. Scientists and organisations are working to protect polar bears, but it is not easy. These animals are a symbol of the Arctic and of nature that needs protection.

Questions:

A. Polar bears are ...

1. the largest land carnivores.
2. the smallest animals in the Arctic.

3. only one metre long.

B. Polar bears live ...

1. in deserts.
2. in the Arctic.
3. in mountains.

C. Their white fur helps them ...

1. to keep warm.
2. to hide when hunting.
3. to see in the dark.

D. Polar bears are good at ...

1. swimming.
2. climbing trees.
3. running fast.

Mount Everest

Mount Everest is the highest mountain in the world. It is part of the Himalayas and lies on the border between Nepal and China. Everest is 8,849 metres high. The first people to reach the top were Edmund Hillary from New Zealand and Tenzing Norgay, a Sherpa from Nepal, in 1953. Since then, thousands of climbers have tried to climb the mountain.

Climbing Mount Everest is very difficult and dangerous. The air is thin and very cold, and strong winds often blow. Many climbers need oxygen tanks to breathe. Local Sherpas often help them carry food, tents, and other things. Today, although climbing Everest is still dangerous, it is also very popular. Hundreds of people try it every year, and many tourists come just to see the mountain.

Questions:

A. Mount Everest is ...

1. the highest mountain in the world.

The Amazon Rainforest

The Amazon rainforest is the largest rainforest in the world. It is in South America and covers parts of nine countries, including Brazil, Peru, and Colombia. The Amazon is sometimes called “the lungs of the Earth” because it produces about 20 percent of the world’s oxygen. Thousands of plants and animals live there, many of which cannot be found anywhere else. For example, the Amazon river dolphin lives only in this part of the world.

The Amazon River is also one of the longest rivers on Earth. It is about 6,400 kilometres long and carries more water than any other river. Local people use the river for transport, food, and water. The rainforest is very important for the whole planet, but today it is in danger. People cut down too many trees, and animals lose their homes. Scientists and organisations around the world are trying to protect the Amazon because without it the Earth’s climate could change.
